

THE WBMA EDUCATIONAL LINK SCHOLARSHIP FUND 1999 Scholarship Recipients

Julia S. Kocubinski graduated from Ronan High School in Ronan, Montana. She has been accepted into the Davidson Honors College at the University of Montana to study Elementary Education.

During high school, Julia was active with the student council, National Honor Society President, Business Professionals of America President, Prom Committee President, Spanish Club, worked on the school newspaper and was captain of the basketball and volleyball teams.

Julia has worked part-time for Lively Times and Polson Theaters.

While in college, aside from taking education classes, she plans to volunteer at local schools and hopes to be able to coach middle school sports.

Patricia Carey Maxwell has attended Linfield College since 1994 where she will earn a degree in social and behavioral sciences as well as complete a certificate in Human Resources Management.

Patricia puts in over forty hours a week at Lumbermen's Building Centers, works as a teaching assistant in two different classes and still manages to attend college on a half-time basis and maintain a high grade point average.

She says she plans on staying in the same field of wood products. The coming years will be challenging to the building materials industry and she would like to help see our industry through these times.

Lindsay Ray Anno graduated from North Medford High School in Medford, Oregon. She will attend the University of Nevada or Portland this fall where she would like to obtain a doctorate in the medical field. It is her desire to either be a family practitioner or an obstetrician.

Lindsay was a member of the Rock Climbing Club, Key Club, Mock Trial Team, Torch Honor Society, Art Club, Junior LPGA Golf Program, Prom Committee Member and Girl Scout. She has also been very active in various community service activities.

This past year Lindsay was a student in the Health Occupations Class at Rogue Valley Medical Center where she will become a certified Nurse Assistant.

Dianna N. Stephens is a graduate of Neah-Kah-Nie High School in Rockaway Beach, Oregon. She is unsure where she will attend college in the fall and what course of study she will take. She is considering majoring in business and minoring in mathematics.

Dianna was involved in student government, a member of the Honor Society, Math Club, Speech Team, as well as many other committees. She was also President of the Oregon Safety Students on the Move Club and District Vice-President of Leo Club. She has also participated in basketball and volleyball.

She has worked in the family's lumberyard for many years and hopes to eventually run the family lumber business.
